

Dear American Medical ID,

In October, after being diagnosed with Pulmonary Embolisms (blood clots in my lungs), and Anticardiolipid Antibody Syndrome (a blood-clotting disorder), I was put on Coumadin.

In January I fainted while shopping; however, strangers just thought I had ONLY fainted, but the paramedics noticed my medical alert bracelet and wasted no time in taking me to the hospital. The ultimate result was I had thrown another blood clot. If not for the medical alert bracelet stating I was taking Coumadin, I wonder how long it would have taken before they actually transported me to the hospital.

Thank you for the medical alert bracelet!
